Chapter Two – The Time Tower

In the blink of an eye, Kirsty and Rachel found themselves in Fairyland, now transformed into fairies with glittering wings on their backs. In front of them stood the silver palace with its four pink towers, and King Oberon and Queen Titania.

The King and Queen were surrounded by a group of fairies, but both Rachel and Kirsty could see that they all looked very unhappy. The girls wondered why.

Francis jumped out of the end of the rainbow and bowed to the King and Queen. "Your Majesties," he announced as the girls stepped out of the rainbow too. "Here are our good friends, Kirsty and Rachel!"

Queen Titania hurried forwards, a welcoming smile on her face. "It's very good of you to come, girls," she said. "We really need your help!"

“What’s happened?” asked Rachel.

“Is it Jack Frost?” Kirsty added.

Queen Titania nodded. “Jack Frost has stolen the Fun Day Flags!” she sighed. “And now the Fun Day Fairies can’t get on with their job of making every day in Fairyland and the human world fun.”

Rachel and Kirsty glanced at the fairies. They looked very miserable and their wings drooped.

“These are our Fun Day Fairies,” said King Oberon. “Megan the Monday Fairy, Talullah the Tuesday Fairy, Willow the Wednesday Fairy, Thea the Thursday Fairy, Freya the Friday Fairy, Sienna the Saturday Fairy and Sarah the Sunday Fairy.”

The fairies managed to smile at Rachel and Kirsty, but they still looked sad. The girls felt sorry for them.

“How do the Fun Day Flags work?” asked Kirsty.

“Come with us to the golden pool,” Queen Titania replied, “and we’ll show you.”
