

The tentacles of the sea anemone are swaying on the coral reef.
The male clownfish watch over their eggs.
Can you see the great big eyes of the babies in these transparent eggs?

A hungry caterpillar hatches from its tiny egg on a sweet-smelling milkweed plant. After a while, the caterpillar will become wrapped in a "shell" of hard skin. Out of this pupa, a beautiful butterfly will emerge.

*It's freezing cold at the South Pole!
Each papa penguin has been carrying an egg
on his feet and keeping it warm in his feathers.
Now, it's time for the little penguins to hatch.*

Leaves are rustling in the wind.
The blackbird eggs are starting to hatch in their warm nest.
One hungry chick is already breaking out of its shell!

...guins to hatch.