Clem loved the beach.
The crunch of the wet sand, the crashing of the waves.
The grass that grew sideways as the wind blew in off the sea.
And the pools that came and went with the changing tides.

She would collect up the treasure that washed ashore but also the things that other people had left behind.

One day, as she was gathering everything in her bucket, she spied a flash of orange, then again...

A crab!

The crab watched her, as it crawled under, over and in between the rocks.

But later, as she was ready to head back with her bucket full, Crab had disappeared.
