

The sun could stretch its fingers to the forest floor in those days.

All the creatures of the forest, the squirrels, deer, and hedgepigs would cross my paths.

The butterflies would alight on me before dusk, when the bats would take their turn in the air.

