Hey you . . .

Welcome to the world.

We've waited so long to meet you - and, oh, has it been worth it.

I want to let you know our dreams and hopes for you and the things about life you must always remember . . .

You are wonderful.

I hope that you never lose sight of the wonder that is you . . .

even though the world won't always let you see it . . .

You stand on the shoulders of greatness.

You share your magical melanin with countless generations of geniuses, creators, leaders and great thinkers.

Your potential is infinite.

Hey You! is a collaboration between Dapo Adeola and eighteen talented Black illustrators:

Alyssa Johnson is a graphic designer and lettering artist who focuses on positivity and feminism. You can find Alyssa playing with her dog Luna or selling prints at a local pop-up shop in Kansas City, Missouri.

Jade Orlando lives in Atlanta, Georgia. When she's not drawing, you can usually find her curled up with her cats and a really good book.

Reggie Brown lives in San Diego, California. He has always loved to draw and can't remember wanting to be anything but an artist. Reggie loves the McRib and wants it back.

Chanté Timothy creates work that explores different themes of diversity and inclusion. She's best known for her debut book A Black Woman Did That by Malaika Adero.

Sharee Miller lives on the east coast of America. Her art is fresh, full of joy and encourages all who view it to smile.

Diane Ewen is from the West Midlands in the UK. She has always been in love with art and graduated from the University of Wolverhampton with a B.A. honours degree in illustration.

Onyinye Iwu is a Nigerian illustrator and author. She was born in Italy where she spent her childhood, then moved to the UK. Onyinye enjoys reading books and drawing patterns.

Gladys Jose lives in Orlando, Florida, with her supportive, loving husband, her energetic, brilliant daughter and a very sweet pup named Miles.

Bex Glending is based in the UK, and has worked on projects such as Seen: Edmonia Lewis, Penultimate Quest, Nubia: Real One and Lupina.

Dunni Mustapha grew up in the UK and has always been fascinated by picture books and magazines. She likes using pictures to tell stories and capturing people's quirks and unique traits.

Charlot Kristensen has worked with clients such as Google, New York Times and Huffpost. Her first graphic novel, What We Don't Talk About, was published in 2020.

Camilla Sucre is a Caribbean American artist born in New York and raised in Baltimore. She studied illustration and film at MICA with a passion for multidisciplinary arts and telling stories.

Jobe Anderson lives in Birmingham in the UK. He loves creating wacky scenarios and making short stories. When he isn't drawing, you'll find him reading comic books and watching movies.

Joelle Avelino is a Congolese and Angolan illustrator and animator. Her animation project with Malala Fund was featured in Design Weekly's favourite International Women's Day projects of 2020.

Nicole Miles is an illustrator, cartoonist, hand-letterer and designer from the Bahamas. She currently lives in West Yorkshire in the UK with her pet snake and human boyfriend.

Kingsley Nebechi is a Nigerian based in London. Crazy for comics, fanatical about films and inspired by African art, Kingsley is recognized for his commercial and gallery work.

Derick Brooks is based in Richmond, Virginia and loves to create adventurous stories about Black folk. He lives with his wife and pets, and really loves potatoes.

Selom Sunu is based in London. His children's illustration work includes The Puffin Book of Big Dreams and New York Times bestseller Ghost by Jason Reynolds.

Hey You! is award-winning illustrator Dapo Adeola's urgent and inspirational message of hope for young, Black dreamers and everybody fighting for a fairer world.

With illustrations from a collection of dazzling Black artists, Hey You! is an honest yet hopeful story of growing up Black, showing the power of creativity, community and collective pride.

A visual feast and a vital tool of positive affirmation, this is an essential book to be read and treasured.
