When I was a boy,
in the garden out front
of the house where we lived,
I asked my grandmother,

“What is love?”

My grandma was old.
I thought she would know.

She picked me up in her arms and said,
“I can’t answer that.”

“Who can?” I asked.

“If you go out into the world,
you might find an answer.”

So I went.
