

LoveReading4kids.co.uk
is a book website created for parents and children to make choosing books easy
and fun

Opening extract from Room of the Broom

Written by
Julia Donaldson

Illustrated by Axel Scheffler

Published by Macmillan Children's Books

All Text is Copyright © of the Author and/or Illustrator

Please print off and read at your leisure.

For Natasha, Sabrina and Jasmine – J.D.

First published 2001 by Macmillan Children's Books
This edition published 2016 by Macmillan Children's Books an imprint of Pan Macmillan
20 New Wharf Road, London N1 9RR
Associated companies throughout the world
www.panmacmillan.com

ISBN 978-1-4472-8657-8

Text copyright © Julia Donaldson 2001, 2016
Illustrations copyright © Axel Scheffler 2001, 2016

The right of Julia Donaldson and Axel Scheffler to be identified as the author and illustrator of this work has been asserted by them in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act 1988.

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in any form or by any means (electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise), without the prior written permission of the publisher.

1 3 5 7 9 8 6 4 2

A CIP catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Printed in Italy

Room on the Broom

by Julia Donaldson

Illustrated by Axel Scheffler

MACMILLAN
CHILDREN'S BOOKS

The witch had a cat
and a very tall hat,
And long ginger hair
which she wore in a plait.
How the cat purred
and how the witch grinned,
As they sat on their broomstick and flew through the wind.

But how the witch wailed
and how the cat spat,
When the wind blew so wildly
it blew off the hat.

"Down!" cried the witch,
and they flew to the ground.
They searched for the hat
but no hat could be found.

Then out of the bushes
on thundering paws
There bounded a dog
with the hat in his jaws.

He dropped it politely,
then eagerly said
(As the witch pulled the hat firmly down on her head),
"I am a dog, as keen as can be.
Is there room on the broom for a dog like me?"

"Yes!" cried the witch,
and the dog clambered on.
The witch tapped the broomstick and whoosh! they were gone.

Over the fields and the forests they flew.
The dog wagged his tail
and the stormy wind blew.
The witch laughed aloud
and held onto her hat,
But away blew the bow
from her long ginger plait!

For every picture in this book, Axel Scheffler did many different sketches – more than for any other book he's illustrated! Read the story and see if you can tell which pictures these early drawings became.

It takes several steps to create the perfect picture . . .

Axel begins by drawing a very rough pencil sketch.

Next he does a neater drawing in pen and ink.

Finally, he uses ink, paint and colouring pencils to create the finished picture.

A Note from the Author

The idea for Room on the Broom came about when I started to think about witches and cats. Witches in storybooks, you see, are almost always accompanied by cats and, of course, the cats often ride with the witches on the backs of their broomsticks.

What would happen, I wondered, if a witch didn't just have a cat but lots of animals? Would they all travel with her? How would they all fit onto a broomstick? And how much weight can one broom carry? And that's where the basic storyline came from.

There wasn't a dragon in the original story, but once the broom had broken and everyone had tumbled to the ground I created him to add some more excitement and drama. And as to the trick that the animals play on the dragon to save the witch? Well, I think I must have been inspired by the story of "The Musicians of Bremen". "The Musicians of Bremen" is a German folktale about four old animals – a donkey, a dog, a cat and a rooster – who come across a band of robbers in a cottage in some woods. They climb on one another's backs and make a fearful din. The robbers are convinced that there must be a terrible creature outside and run away, leaving the animals to settle in for the evening. It's a wonderful story and I am indebted to it because, although it was unconscious at the time, I think it must have been an inspiration.

The witch herself though, is definitely based on me! I am quite scatty. When I was a child I was always dropping and losing things, just like the witch in Room on the Broom. In fact, I still do. I can remember seeing the first sketches that Axel drew of the witch and asking my editor if she could be made a bit younger and less tidy, and if her nose might be a bit smaller. She looked older, wartier and much neater than I'd thought of her when I was writing the story. But now, of course, I am extremely fond of the witch and couldn't imagine her looking any other way.

Julia Donaldson

August 2015

