

"Fierce, brave and compassionate"

NATASHA FARRANT

Little House

The background of the cover is a soft, painterly illustration of a kitchen. A young girl with brown hair and glasses, wearing a blue striped shirt and red shorts, is kneeling on the floor. She is painting a small, yellow house with a blue roof. The house has several windows and doors, some of which are being painted yellow. The kitchen shelves in the background are filled with various items like bottles, jars, and containers. The overall atmosphere is warm and creative.

KATYA BALEN

Illustrated by Richard Johnson

“Beautiful and heartbreaking and glorious all at once.
A little masterpiece” STRUAN MURRAY

“Little House tackles big world issues in a way that young readers will understand – a beautifully told story, light of touch, warm of heart” JASBINDER BILAN

“An enchantingly told, exquisitely illustrated story about a young girl’s move from cosy innocence to a growing understanding of some of the sadnesses in the wider world” NICOLA PENFOLD

“Fierce, brave and compassionate” NATASHA FARRANT

“A beautiful, empathetic story about understanding the sacrifice sometimes needed to build a better world” SARAH ANN JUCKES

“Utterly gorgeous and beautifully written, this story about the interconnectedness of humanity and the importance of caring for others is both moving and full of hope” JENNY PEARSON “Charming, tender and shines a sensitive spotlight on the true meaning of home” A.M. HOWELL

Also by Katya Balen:

Birdsong

Nightjar

Little House

KATYA BALEN

Illustrated by Richard Johnson

Published by Barrington Stoke
An imprint of HarperCollinsPublishers
Westerhill Road, Bishopbriggs, Glasgow, G64 2QT

www.barringtonstoke.co.uk

HarperCollinsPublishers Macken House, 39/40 Mayor Street Upper,
Dublin 1, DO1 C9W8, Ireland

First published in 2024

Text © 2024 Katya Balen

Illustrations © 2024 Richard Johnson

Cover design © 2024 HarperCollinsPublishers Limited

The moral right of Katya Balen and Richard Johnson to be identified as the author and illustrator of this work has been asserted in accordance with the Copyright, Designs and Patents Act, 1988

ISBN 978-1-80090-255-8

10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2 1

All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in a retrieval system, or transmitted, in whole or in any part in any form or by any means, electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise without the prior permission in writing of the publisher and copyright owners

A catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library

Printed and Bound in the UK using 100% Renewable Electricity at Martins the Printers Ltd

This book contains FSC™ certified paper and other controlled sources to ensure responsible forest management.

For more information visit: www.harpercollins.co.uk/green

For my German Girls – Laura, Insa, and now little Lotta. You make the world beautiful.

Chapter 1

The night feels soft and warm when we arrive. The nightbirds are singing and the sound is gentle and low and all around us. Mum loops her arm round my waist but I wriggle away and let the shadows swallow me. The darkness is everywhere and it creeps and twists like the vines that snake up the side of the house.

The house looms ahead. Its shape shifts in the darkness and I shudder. It looks like one of those haunted mansions from the fairground. It's all edges and turrets and windows that flash with the whisper of ghosts and scattered stars.

I'd rather spend the summer hiding in the Yardley Fair Haunted House than have to spend it here. At least there'd be candyfloss at the fair. I could sneak out at night and play Hook-a-Duck and eat toffee apples until my teeth fizzed.

Mum rings the bell at the front door and it echoes in the still night air. An owl hoots and I twist to find it. You don't get owls in the city and it might be cool to see one just once.

But you do get funfairs in the city. And a summer filled with noise and music and cinema and friends and sleepovers and football in the parched dry park. I think of ice lollies that drip down your wrist and make your hot skin sticky with neon sugar. The summer everyone else is getting. Back home. But everyone else has nice normal parents who work in banks and schools and hospitals and shops.

The owl hoots again but I can't find it in the gloom. The stars are brighter here than at home but their glow only offers speckles of light on the gravelled drive. It's like the whole driveway is all the way at the bottom of the sea and the light is filtered and wobbling. The moon is a silvery O but it can't push back the night. There are no streetlamps or car headlights or glowing billboards and the dark has taken over.

Mum rings the bell again and keeps her long finger pressed down until a light flicks on somewhere inside. There's the crackle of a voice and the soft shuffle of feet.

I keep myself pressed into the shadows and I close my eyes. Just for a moment everything disappears and I imagine I'm back at home in my cosy bed with Fudge the rabbit. He's snuffling sleepily in his hay nest and a new summer's day is waiting for me when I open my eyes in the morning light.

"Juno, what on earth are you doing?" Mum hisses. Her cool hand is circled around my wrist and my eyes snap open. I want to tell her not to leave me and I want to tell her that I don't want her to go. I want to tell her that I am so worried and scared every single time Dad goes away that it feels like my whole chest will burst. Now Mum and Dad are both going and it feels like my heart will splinter into a thousand pieces.

“Mum,” I whisper into the soft dark. “Please don't go. Please stay back. Just stay with me for the summer and we'll have the best time ever, I promise. We can go to the funfair and I'll make surprise pasta but not with mustard this time. Please?”

“The mustard was definitely surprising,” says Mum. There's a small smile on her face but it slips away into sadness. “But you know I can't stay, my love. You know I have to go. It's not for long, Junebug. But I have to go. I've not helped in so long. But I need to now. Those tiny children. They've lost their homes. And their mothers. Their fathers. They've lost everything and I want to give them something back. Something more than just words or a place to stay that's not their own. It's not enough to give people just enough. You have to give them hope. You have to give them a home. You have to make them feel like there is still beauty in the world. To make them feel that life can still be beautiful. They need that. I need to help give them that again."

I need you, I want to say. I want to shout it amongst the stars and let my voice bounce off the moon and startle the owls from the trees. I want my words to echo in the night air over and over until Mum listens. But me needing her isn't the same as the way the world far away needs her and so I can't say anything. It's not the same at all. But it still feels like my heart is trembling and I wish she would stay right here with me.

Then there's a rattle and the front door is open. My grandfather is standing in a doorway of amber light and Mum has already turned away.