Opening extract from

Wendel's Workshop

Written by

Chris Riddell

Published by

Macmillan Children's Books

For My Father
Chris Riddell

Wendel's Workshop

Macmillan Children's Books

WENDEL was an inventor.

Sometimes his inventions worked perfectly, and sometimes they didn't.

When they didn't, Wendel just threw them away and started again.

Wendel invented all day and into the night. Sometimes he was so busy inventing he forgot to go to bed.

And he never had time to tidy up.

Wendel's workshop
became untidier . . .   and untider . . .   and UNTIDIER.

"I need some help," said Wendel to himself.

So Wendel invented a robot.

CLUNK!

CLUNK!

CLUNK!

"I'll call you Clunk," said Wendel.

Clunk set to work tidying Wendel's workshop.

He made the bed ...

folded the clothes ...

and mopped the floor.

"Oh dear," said Wendel.