I Want My Mum!

It was raining and the Little Princess was busy with her painting when the awful thing happened . . .

Mum held the soggy picture. "That's WONDERFUL!" she said. "A rainy day." The Little Princess smiled.

When the rain stopped, she went outside to play on the see-saw and the terrible thing happened . . . she banged her knee.

. . . she knocked her water pot over and she spoiled the best painting she had ever done.

"Don't worry," said the Maid, "everything's OK!" And she mopped up the mess. "I WANT MY MUM!" yelled the Little Princess.

"There, there," said the Doctor. "That's OK now." And she put some smelly stuff onto it. "I WANT MY MUM!" cried the Little Princess.

And Mum kissed the smelly knee better. The Little Princess smiled.

That night, the Little Princess couldn't sleep because of the monster living under the bed.

"There isn't a monster living under the bed," said Dad. "Look!" But the Little Princess daren't. "I WANT MY MUM!" she screamed.

"Oh, GOODY!" said Mum. "Dinosaur eggs. I love those." The Little Princess smiled. "Hey, save some for ME!"

All morning the Little Princess had to play by herself. The Maid popped in to play Ludo. "I WANT MY MUM!" bawled the Little Princess.

"I'll read stories to you and the monster," said Mum. The Little Princess smiled. And fell asleep.

"I HATE eggs!" said the Little Princess at breakfast. "Eat it up," said the Cook. "It's awfully good for you." "I WANT MY MUM!" howled the Little Princess.

The Admiral popped in to play boats. "I WANT MY MUM!" hooted the Little Princess.

The Little Prince popped in to play anything at all. And to stop the noise. "I WANT MY MUM!" shrieked the Little Princess.

At last Mum came, with some thrilling news. "The Little Duchess has asked you over for a sleepover tonight, with crisps and a video."

The Little Princess packed her bag, and began to cry. "What's the MATTER?" said Mum.

... but the video was terribly funny and the crisps were terribly good. The Little Princess smiled.

Back in the Royal Palace, Mum looked at Dad. "She's having a wonderful time," she said. Then ...

"I DON'T WANT TO GO!" sobbed the Little Princess. "I WANT TO STAY HERE WITH GILBERT AND YOU!" "But Gilbert and I are coming with you," said Mum.

At the Little Duchess's castle, the video was turned on and Mum crept away. "I WANT MY M..." began the Little Princess ...

"... I WANT MY LITTLE PRINCESS!"
