What Am I?

The gleam within the dream
The ear within the song
The germ within the seed
The eye within the storm

I don't hang around long

A touch of a brain-breeze A glimpse of a bee's knee A thought on the wing A firefly's glow

I make a small light wherever I go

I can come in the sun
I can come in the rain
I can come when you're Simply gazing from a train

I unlock your creation My name? Idea

Sun, You're a Star

Millions billions trillions of stars – all keeping their distance

Only you, Sun, came with your shimmering dance – cutting a yellow path through the dark

My kind of star cheering us with your glitz Your autograph – a flourish of sunbeams across our skin.

Sky-Artist

Is there no end, Sky-Artist, to your endless cloud sketches?

Each time I blink you change shape – a bevy of bears an army of elephants a shoal of fish turning sheep

Himalayan pile-ups so high and deep we roll in the waves of a great sea-blanket

Then in a sunny change of mood you wipe your canvas down to its own sky-blue

Soon palaces are floating over me – a whale lying on a cushiony throne. Why not a small cloud-dog to follow me home?
