

Helping your children choose books they will love

Lovereading4kids.co.uk is a book website created for parents and children to make choosing books easy and fun

Opening extract from
You Wouldn't Want to be in the Trenches in World War One!

Written by
Alex Woolf and Dave Antram

Published by
Book House

All Text is Copyright © of the Author and/or Illustrator

Please print off and read at your leisure.

Author:

Alex Woolf studied history at Essex University, England. He is the author of over sixty books for children, many of them on historical topics. They include Days That Shook the World: Assassination in Sarajevo and Past in Pictures: A Photographic View of World War One.

Artist:

David Antram was born in Brighton, England, in 1958. He studied at Eastbourne College of Art and then worked in advertising for 15 years before becoming a full-time artist. He has illustrated many children's non-fiction books.

Series creator:

David Salaria was born in Dundee, Scotland. He has illustrated a wide range of books and has created and designed many new series for publishers in the UK and overseas. David established The Salaria Book Company in 1989. He lives in Brighton with his wife, illustrator Shirley Willis, and their son Jonathan.

Editor: Victoria England

Editorial Assistant: Mark Williams

Published in Great Britain in MMXIV by Book House, an imprint of
The Salaria Book Company Ltd
25 Marlborough Place, Brighton BN1 1UB
www.salaria.com
www.book-house.co.uk

PB ISBN-13: 978-1-909645-22-6

SALARIYA

© The Salaria Book Company Ltd MMXIV
All rights reserved. No part of this publication may be reproduced, stored in or introduced into a retrieval system or transmitted in any form, or by any means (electronic, mechanical, photocopying, recording or otherwise) without the written permission of the publisher. Any person who does any unauthorised act in relation to this publication may be liable to criminal prosecution and civil claims for damages.

1 3 5 7 9 8 6 4 2

A CIP catalogue record for this book is available from the British Library.

Printed and bound in China.

This book is sold subject to the conditions that it shall not, by way of trade or otherwise, be lent, resold, hired out, or otherwise circulated without the publisher's prior consent in any form or binding or cover other than that in which it is published and without similar condition being imposed on the subsequent purchaser.

Visit our website at www.book-house.co.uk or go to www.salaria.com for free electronic versions of:
You Wouldn't Want to be an Egyptian Mummy!
You Wouldn't Want to be a Roman Gladiator!
You Wouldn't Want to be a Polar Explorer!
You Wouldn't Want to sail on a 19th-Century Whaling Ship!

Visit
www.salaria.com
for our online catalogue and free interactive web books.

You Wouldn't Want to Be in the Trenches in World War One!

Written by
Alex Woolf

Illustrated by David Antram

A hole you'd rather not be in

Created and designed by David Salaria

BOOK HOUSE
a SALARIYA imprint

Contents

Introduction

Joining up

Training

The trenches

Rats and lice

Bully beef, bread and biscuits

The cold and the wet

Under fire

No-man's-land

Animals of war

Tanks, tunnelling and other terrifying tactics

Over the top!

Back to Blighty

Glossary

Index

5

6

8

10

12

14

16

18

20

22

24

26

28

30

32

Introduction

It's August 1914. You are 16-year-old Tommy Atkins, living in London. War has just broken out in Europe. The Allies, led by Britain, France and Russia, are fighting the Central Powers, led by Germany.

You're very proud of your country. Britain is the most powerful nation in the world, with an enormous global empire. But recently, Germany's grown powerful, too, and is now challenging Britain for the role of top superpower. In Britain, everyone is very enthusiastic about the war and confident of victory. You get swept up in the excitement. Many people optimistically predict a victory by Christmas. Little do they know that because of new weapons and tactics the conflict will drag on for four years and will be one of the bloodiest, most gruesome wars ever fought.

* Neutral in 1914, but joined the Allies later in the war
 Neutral in 1914, but joined the Central Powers in 1915

Joining up

Even though you're under age, you join the queue at the local recruiting centre and try to enlist with the army. When it's your turn to be interviewed, the recruiting sergeant asks for your age. You tell him and he says 'Clear off, son. You can't join up unless you're 18 and can't fight until you're 19. Come back tomorrow and see if you're the right age.' So you return the next day and give your age as 19. Then you hold up your right hand and swear to fight for king and country. The sergeant winks and hands over your first day's wages. You realise that the army is so desperate for soldiers, it's prepared to bend its own rules.

FIGHTING PHYSIQUE. You can't join up unless you're at least 5 foot 6 inches with a chest size of 35 inches.

YOUR COUNTRY NEEDS YOU. Lord Kitchener's impressive moustache and pointing finger are responsible for recruiting millions.

TAKING THE OATH. Recruits have to swear loyalty to king and country.

Handy hint

If your parents won't let you join up, sign on with a false name. That way they won't be able to track you down.

CAPS AND HELMETS. At the start of the war, soldiers wore peaked caps made of cloth. But the alarming number of deaths from head wounds led the authorities to issue Allied soldiers with steel helmets from 1915. German troops had to wait until 1916 to get the same protection.

UNIFORM AND EQUIPMENT. British soldiers wear woollen khaki uniforms with belts, packs and pouches made of a strong material called webbing.

Training

Xou're sent to your regimental depot where you receive your kit, then to a training camp to join your battalion. Here you get your first taste of army discipline and training. You sleep in a tent because there aren't enough huts. There are shortages of kit and equipment, and for the first few days you train in your own shoes and a red jacket dating back to the Boer War. There's also a shortage of officers because all the experienced ones are in France, fighting. Men have been brought out of retirement to train recruits. One gives out instructions while sitting in a Bath chair.

TO FRANCE. After just a few weeks' training, you're sent to a camp in northern France. You see the wounded returning from the front.

Handy hint

The French call bayonets 'toothpicks', but don't be tempted to use them for that purpose!

I fought in the Crimea. Can't you know.

Bath chair

Right, I've taken this pin thing out, now what do I do?

NEW SKILLS. You're given training in physical fitness, how to march, first aid and how to defend yourself against a gas attack.

You're also taught basic field skills, like how to handle your weapons safely, fire a gun, throw a grenade and fight with a bayonet.

The trenches

You go 'up the line' to the trenches. The trench at the front is the 'fire trench' and behind that are rows of support and reserve trenches where you can fall back if under attack. Beyond the fire trench is 'No-man's-land', then the German trenches. These lines of opposing trenches stretch all the way from the North Sea to Switzerland. You quickly learn that life in the trenches can be both tough and boring. Every day begins with a 'stand-to' an hour before dawn, when the enemy is most likely to attack: every man has to stand on the trench fire step for an hour or more, rifle loaded, bayonet fixed.

GERMAN TRENCHES (left) are the best: deep and lined with concrete, with dug-outs 15 m below ground, safe from shell fire.

BORING DAYS. When not on sentry duty or digging, soldiers retire to their dug-outs. They fill their idle moments writing letters, playing cards or singing songs.

STAND-TO. Tommies dread this daily routine. They call it 'Morning Hate'.

BUSY NIGHTS. Trenches are often busiest at night, when soldiers can't be spotted by the enemy. Trenches are repaired and teams sent out into no-man's-land to collect the dead and wounded.